PRES. HOOVER'S INFLUENCE NOW APPROACHES TEST

Food Relief Amendment, Soldiers' Compensation, and
Other Problems

HOUSE BY PRESIDENT

Testimony Directed to Emergency Unemployment Appropriations

By William S. Seal
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—President Hoover's influence with an overwhelmingly Republican House of Representatives today approached a serious test in battles over the Senate's $25,000,000 food relief amendment, cash payment of soldiers' compensation certificates and embargo legislation directed against Soviet Russia.

In the face of the administration's opposition to all such proposals, House committees now are grappling with all questions, and leaders are considering the necessity of compromises.

Thus far during the present short session the House, as usual, has stood by the President in his many clashes with the Senate.

Whether leaders can keep members in line, with pressure being exerted from "back home," is causing serious concern.

With charges of delay ranking, the House appropriations committee planned to conclude its hearings of the $25,000,000 amendment today with testimony of Red Cross officials, perhaps others.

Thus far, in two days of hearings, the $25,000,000 fund has scarcely been mentioned. Testimony has been directed largely to emergency unemployment appropriations voted by Congress, apparently with a view to strengthening opposition to the so-called "dole."

The House hearing on payment of the three and a half billions of soldiers' compensation certificates is to get under way tomorrow.

WETS AND DRYs SEEM TO AVOID A SHOWDOWN

Prohibition Issue Pushed Into The Background At Washington

By William K. Hutchinson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The prohibition issue, though agitating the whole nation, was pushed into the background in the Senate today with both wets and drys apparently anxious to avoid a showdown.

This development in the strategy of the perennial prohibition war on Capitol Hill was noted when drys quietly permitted the drastic Howell bill, proposing bone-dry enforcement for the national capital, to be sidetracked without a fight. Their surrender virtually killed the bill, since it set a precedent for abandoning the measure every time an appropriation bill comes before the Senate. This will place a stubborn obstacle before the measures, as the Senate still must act upon six more appropriation bills and 12 conference reports.

The prohibition issue will be raised from time to time, but unless there is a change of sentiment again, a showdown appears unlikely in the present session. There will be one flare-up when the Department of Justice appropriation bill reaches the Senate, with its funds for the dry bureau. Even then, administration leaders do not anticipate more than a skirmish.

Other skirmishes may occur over the Tydings resolutions, one proposing an inquiry into how the Wickersham Commission reached its dry conclusions and wet individual opinions, the other calling on the commission to make public its reports from expert investigators. Senator Tydings (D) of Maryland, wet leader, announced he would force a showdown on both resolutions, but has avoided such a contest when the opportunity offered on several occasions.

HERE AND THERE THRUOUT BUCKS COUNTY

Doylestown Mill Owner is Sued for Death of Man His Machine Struck—Chalfont Grange Awarded Silver Cup for Best Fair Exhibit—Members of Doylestown Nature Club Hear Talk on Sculpture and Nature.

Edith Stroud, of Plumsteadville, Bucks county, has filed an action in the office of Prothonotary Haldeman, at Norristown, in which she seeks to recover $35,000 damages for the death of her husband, George Stroud, T. defendant in the action is Harris Holmes, of Doylestown. The suit was filed by Attorney Maxwell Strawbridge.

Mrs. Stroud blames the negligence of Holmes for the death of her husband, on November 26, 1930. It is alleged that about 6.45 on the evening of the above date her husband was sitting in a parked automobile on Easton road, a short distance from the County line. It is alleged that the auto of Holmes crashed into the Stroud car, and the latter was so badly hurt he died a short time later in Abington Hospital.

According to the plaintiff in the case Stroud, who was thirty-seven years old, was receiving good wages as a plumber, and that in addition to the wife, there was a sixteen-year-old daughter dependent upon his support.

In recognition of having won the first prize for Grange exhibits at the Doylestown Fair last fall, the Chalfont Grange, was presented with a beautiful silver cup, the gift of the master of the Grange, Harry N. C. Chubb, the cup was presented by Ely R. Fretz, a member of the Richland Grange.

Members of the Doylestown Nature Club were the guests of Mrs. Irvin M. James at her home on West Court street, when "Sculpture and Nature" were discussed.

Animal sculpture was discussed by Miss Laura Anderson, who spoke of the very first crude drawings of prehistoric animals by cave dwellers. Some examples of these, she said, have been found on rocks on an island in the Susquehanna River near Lancaster. She said that animal sculpture in America did not develop until the end of the nineteenth century when Crawford Storey and others became known.

Takes Trenton Whirlwinds
Into Camp by Score of 46 to 19

MOON IS STAR OF GAME

(By T. M. Juno)

TULLYTOWN, Jan. 28.—The Tullytown A. C. basketball five extended its winning streak to five straight here last night when it took the Trenton Whirlwinds into camp by the score of 46-19.

The Whirlwinds were no match for the home club and were on the defense during most of the milling. The resident quint seemed to score at will and kept rolling two-pointers in to the net.

Moon, the Tullytown pivot man, scored enough points alone to beat the Trentonians. Moon tallied 21 points during the forty minutes of play. Although it must be said that the rest of the Tullytown team was continually "feeding" the ball to the "sure-shot" of the evening.

With the winning streak still going in high gear, the Tullytown management announced that on Friday evening two strong teams from this section will play.

The line-up:

TULLYTOWN A. C.
	FG.	FT.	Pts.
Carman f	4	1	9
Moon f	10	1	21
Lake c	3	6	6

Olfone f	2	0	4
Fowler c	2	1	5

Totals	9	1	19

In the first game of the evening the Tullytown Reserves continued their winning streak by adding the Bristol Violets to their list of victims. The final score was 29-20.

The game was close and hard fought throughout, but was marred by the (Continued on Page 6) the Commission on Inter-racial Cooperation. Dr. Alexander dealt entirely with the Negro problem of today and being a southerner was considered qualified to speak upon the subject.

Four phases of the question were considered. He first touched upon the fact that the Negro was brought to this country to withstand the heat and the toil of the south. It was at first thought the race might not be able to survive the climate of the United States, but it was found the Negro brought here from Africa could withstand the climate better than the whites who live in Africa.

Recalling that Mr. and Mrs. John S. Eastburn had been married fifteen years ago, a number of neighbors and friends of the couple succeeded in springing them a surprise at their home on Largent road near New Hope Saturday evening.

The evening was spent in a pleasant manner with the playing of cards. During the evening refreshments were served. The bride and groom of fifteen years were showered with a number of appropriate gifts.

Mouse Electrocuted In Radio Cabinet

By "The Stroller"

The radio in his few years of existence has been looked upon as a "life-saver" many times, rather than an instrument of death—but a few days ago one in the vicinity of Bristol proved to be the latter.

A family of radio fans with keen senses of smell realized that things were not just as they should be about the much-used radio. A peculiar odor emitted from the box, and just what the trouble was no one seemed to be able to fathom. Music and speeches came in as usual, but the odor persisted and grew.

The wife just knew some part of that radio was slowly burning when the switch was turned on.

A service man was called, and in a small aperture, hardly large enough for a small finger to be inserted, lay a mouse—electrocuted.

OUSTER SUIT TO COME BEFORE THE COURT ON FRIDAY

Argument to Be Heard by Judge Shull at Doylestown

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE

Attorneys for Both Sides Prepare to Present Cases

The long-awaited announcement of the date for argument in the ouster proceedings of the Hilltown Taxpayers' Association against the Hilltown Township School Board, was made today.

The argument will take place on Friday morning at 10 o'clock, in the Bucks County Court House at Doylestown. Attorney Harry Grim, representative of the plaintiffs, made the announcement to his retainers, and Attorney Mark Thatcher, for the school board, acted for the directors.

A larger representation from Hilltown township is expected to hear the argument before Judge Schull, of Monroe county.

Hilltown township's embattled school situation, with Hilltown Taxpayers' Association anxiously awaiting argument and final decision in proceedings to oust the township's school directors for alleged "willful" refusal to heed protests of 795 out of 1200-voting citizens against the board's site choice for a $110,000 consolidated high school, lost something of its suspense today.

Officially, but not less authoritatively, members of the ward board of the fighting taxpayers, who feared the school board might go ahead with plans to use the site which citizens claim is too small, excessively priced and unfairly located, notwithstanding the pending ouster suits, have learned the directors have no such purpose.

A spokesman for the board asserted it is satisfied that the directors are marking time; confining their activities to keeping the schools open and working; doing nothing whatever that can be deferred without interference with routine. Actually employees of the board are running the fourteen little schools which may be abolished some day, when the bitter controversy is terminated.

Another public rally of the foes of the school board is scheduled for next month.

SECTIONAL POLITICS

President Hoover has declared a fight to the finish with Congress if the latter persists in its plan to distribute through the American Red Cross a $25,000,000 dole among drought refugees. It has become clear that he is carrying around a veto labeled with the Robinson measure.

Senator Robinson's plan violates the traditions of both the Red Cross and the Federal Government. It would invite confusion and possible disaster for the former, which has always depended upon voluntary public contributions. Once the Government assumes the burden of emergency relief this great agency of mercy will find it increasingly difficult to raise funds for its work among the victims of disaster.

Were there any excuse for such a government appropriation as that contemplated in the Robinson plan Congress would be justified in adopting it, but the Red Cross itself deprecates it, and no public demand has been heard. Under these circumstances the citizen is justified in assuming that somebody is playing politics with human misery, that the $25,000,000 dole is for vote-buying rather than for drought relief.

What irony does the author of the bill have in the fire? In the first place, Mr. Robinson's home state, Arkansas, is the chief sufferer from the drought. As the political leader of that state he sees a political advantage in drawing relief from the Federal Treasury rather than from state funds, and in fighting in behalf of his constituents for something for nothing. It may be good Democratic politics, but it is poor government.

LOANS INSTEAD OF CHARITY

Unemployment works no great hardship upon that large number accustomed to receiving charity, but a difficult condition to reach by ordinary measures of relief is that of the man and family whose financial emergency is concealed behind a personal pride which will not permit them to accept what seems to be charity.

This type of unfortunate will not join bread lines nor appeal for or accept "baskets," preferring to suffer mental and physical torture rather than become a charity "case."

Out of the present emergency the Government has evolved a means of assisting these persons. A loan fund available to the unemployed who can show sufficient evidence of responsibility and good prospects for the future, has been created. Reasonable privacy is assured and repayment provided for.

Methods of this sort are the best in the long run. In the case of those who have no compunctions about accepting charity it would be for their own good were they to receive loans instead of doles. Honorable obligations encourage thrift and providence.

The dole is un-American. Relief loans are traditionally American.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Nancy Hollenbeck, young, beautiful and romantic, heeds her mother's warning against marrying a poor man and gives up Mat Tully. She accepts the attentions of Jack Beamer who plans to divorce his rich wife and marry Nancy. On a mountain trip, Nancy falls in love with Roger Decatur, a handsome ranger, and marries him. At first she is happy in his mountain cabin, but when he leaves on a long trip, she flees to her home. Without informing her family of her marriage, she re-enters the old social life. Beamer is as ardent as ever, but Nancy repulses his embraces. Roger's letters arouse Mrs. Hollenbeck's suspicions. Nancy pleads with Roger to meet her at a hotel. She waits in vain. Beamer enters the lobby and takes her to tea. She tells him of Roger but not of the marriage. Beamer receives a jolt when his wife refuses to divorce him.

CHAPTER XXXV.

If she could only forget Roger, as he had forgotten her! He thought more of his work than of her. Why couldn't she care more for her life, her future, than for him? Why couldn't she be happy thinking about Jack. Why did she have to think about Roger, even when Jack was talking to her, even while she was planning the clothes she would have, the jewels, the lovely home?

Well, she would get over it. She'd make herself get over this thing about Roger. Hadn't he let her sit for hours in a hotel lobby, amongst strangers, waiting for him, after she had begged him to come, laid her heart bare, told him how much she needed him...

Even his lame excuse came late. When she thought of that her eyes darkened with anger. They were right, mama and the others. It didn't pay to love... to scrub and cook and wash dishes and never think of yourself... She had been a fool, a silly, wicked fool. She was paying for it now. For the crazy, happy days last summer, for her poor, brief honeymoon...

Accepts Gift.

No use crying over spilt milk... but it's so hard, so hard, when you've cared so much...

Never again! No more wild ecstasies for Nancy, no more heartbreak... She'd let the man do all the caring next time. Her next marriage would be different. She let Jack give her a diamond harpin.

The family would have a fit if they knew it, but they didn't have to know it. Nor about the taxi arrangement either. Jack had arranged to have all her taxi bills charged to him. He couldn't take her places in his car; they had to be so careful of what people would think. "And I'm certainly not going to have you riding the street cars!" he argued. Why quarrel with him? She let him have his way.

She met him "accidentally" on corners. In moving picture houses. In little grills and restaurants with private boxes. It wasn't much fun, meeting that way, but what else could they do? At least it was better than going for rides in the country.

The rides were all right, or they would have been if he were content to ride. But he was always wanting to stop. To park, and... well, "pet" was hardly the word to apply to a millionaire's love-making, but that was what it amounted to for Nancy.

At last she was a... redit to mama's training. She thought of so many ways to avoid being kissed... "Oh, Jack, let ME drive... I'd just love to drive... give me a cigarette... let's go on to the next town and get some wine to eat..." It rather amused

She felt all the life oozing out of her. "Yes... who... who is it?"

Jack. She wasn't really cold. Just scared, poor kid. Worried about his wife. Well, he'd fix that.

"We'll be married in Spring," he told Nancy over and over. "Trust me—I'll get this divorce, and get it soon!"

He wished he could believe it himself. Anita hadn't gone back to Reno. She made it very plain that she had no intention of ever going there again. She stayed on in the Jackson Street house. There had come a smug look about her mouth. She thought she was cheating him out of happiness. But he knew she couldn't do it for long. Something might cheat her... something that had been waiting for her a long time, something that had already marked her for its own. Death.

Dr. Snelling, her physician, had warned him. "Don't let this alarm you unduly, Beamer. Remember, bad hearts sometimes surprise us. She may outlive you, man. But at the same time your wife is in a serious condition. The least excitement, the least physical strain and..." Dr. Snelling held up his hand. "She may go like that—like that!"

Jack thought about that when she looked too smug. He wouldn't do anything to precipitate the end, of course. But he watched for it. Sometimes he fancied the shadow was already upon her. He was gentle with her then. When her maid telephoned that she was confined to her bed, he came to see her and sent flowers... Funny how it pleased her... bought with her own money. He must remember to send her other things. He had been prodigal with his gifts in the first year or two of their marriage when he was still impressed with all she had done for him...

Through its wide doors the wind from the bay blows smartly, bearing on its breath the smell of salt marshes, low-tide, tar, clams. So that only in the corners does the smell of waiting linger. Most of the atmosphere of farewells, welcomes, nervous waiting is swept out on the pungent breeze.

A cold, unhappy place with none of the merry bustle of other stations. A place to board a train, that's all.

Roger Decatur, more tired than he knew after his hours of travel, sat in a corner with a battered brown bag between his knees and an unopened newspaper in his hands. He had watched the door, staring into the bright sun until his eyes ached.

The minute he turned his eyes away her taxi drove up and she got out.

with her wrinkled, yellow hand. "That so?" he smiled back. He was thinking of Nancy.

Nancy thought it was he when mama said a gentleman wanted to speak to her at the telephone.

"Hello!" she called brightly. "Hello, Jack!" she almost said.

"Hello... is that you, Nancy?" Nancy sat down. Her knees were sagging. She felt all the life oozing out of her, as the air oozes out of a pricked balloon. "Yes... who... who is it?"

She licked her dry lips. She knew. She did not need his answer.

Her Reply.

"It's Roger, Nancy. I'm in town. At Sixteenth Street Depot. I'll be right out."

She thought she heard him hanging up. She sobbed into the black open mouth of the telephone. "No, no, no... you mustn't! Roger... wait... wait, do you hear me? Operator, you cut me off..."

Roger's voice again. "You mean... you will not see me?" Yes, that's it. That's the best way! She wanted to say, but instead she heard herself crying. "No, no. It's just that I... Wait. Wait there at the depot—I'll be there—five minutes—"

Sixteenth Street Station, Oakland, is built on filled in ground. It vibrates when the long trains from the East bear down upon it rounding the curve. It shivers when the locals on the elevated tracks—for a few hundred yards the West boats an elevated—rattle by overhead.

COMMISSION TELLS OF RIDE OF PAUL REVERE

Patriot's Service to Country
Recalled As Washington
Bi-Centenary Nears

DIDN'T REACH CONCORD

"Listen my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere,"

In these famous words the beloved poet, Longfellow, began his own account of an important and colorful incident in American history. This excellent story-poem is universally known among the school children of the country, but it seems that the venerable bard allowed his sense of the dramatic to obscure the facts in the case, with the result that a somewhat fictitious story has been perpetuated in an interesting but inaccurate epic. For, instead of reaching Concord, as Longfellow relates, Paul Revere was captured by the English just outside of Lexington.

The Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bi-centennial Commission, apparently as particular with regard to the truth as was the great Father of His Country, has issued a statement in recognition of the one hundred and ninety-sixth birthday anniversary, on January 1st, of the "patriot" Mercury, which tells the story of Paul Revere's immortal "midnight ride."

The year 1775 opened upon a very critical situation in the American Colonies, and even the most hopeful were becoming convinced that an armed conflict with the mother country was inevitable. British troops were stationed in Boston, which was considered the hot bed of rebellion, but the presence of these soldiers only made worse an already hopeless condition. The citizens of Boston vigorously protested England's action in stationing an army there, and committees were formed to keep a vigilant eye on the Redcoats and all their movements. One purpose of these committees was to prevent the capture of John Hancock and Samuel Adams, whom the English regarded as seditionists and who were at that time really the leaders of the Massachusetts resistance to the authority of Parliament.

Paul Revere, a Boston silversmith, whose father was a Huguenot refugee to the colonies, was a member of one of these committees which reported directly to Adams and Hancock. In the early part of April, 1775, the movements of the British troops aroused the suspicions of the patriot vigilantes, who became convinced that the capture of their leaders was intended. Revere had visited Lexington a few days before his memorable ride took place and on his way back to Boston had stopped in Charlestown to arrange with a friend the means to be employed in appraising the latter of the movements of the soldiers. Adams and Hancock were in Lexington and if their capture were intended the men had to be informed beforehand.

On the night of April 18, Dr. Joseph Warren learned that eight hundred troops under Lt. Col. Francis Smith were leaving with the double objective of capturing Hancock and Adams and destroying the military stores at Concord which the patriots had been collecting. The future hero of Bunker Hill immediately dispatched William Dawes for Lexington, from which

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Nancy Lee

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I wonder if you agree with me, that love means tender attachment and strong devotion as much as service and sacrifice?

I am a young married woman with little children, and have sacrificed my life for a man toward whom I only cherished a friendly, sympathetic feeling, and who, though a gentleman to me, I realize I never did and never can really love, due to our natures being so entirely different. So, often since my marriage, I have realized what a great injustice I did myself, as this love was only a one-sided affair. Yet, for the sake of the children, I am willing to be kind, live with him, and serve him, but so far as enjoying his company is concerned, as I would that of women and girl friends whom I really do care for, that can never be, for he does not possess a lovable personality at all in my opinion.

CORINNE: The injustice has been done to the man, not to you. You should have known your mind when you married him, and, unless you had a certain affection for him, you were wrong to enter into the obligations of matrimony. Be big and broad, put all unpleasant thoughts from you. Don't expect a paradise on earth, because very few of us ever discover it. Most of us are glad enough if life flows along without any misfortune or serious happening. Rejoice in your home and children, and try to bring out the sociable side of your husband's nature by bringing the better side of yourself to the surface.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am quite an interested reader of your column, and feel you can help me, as you have others.

I am a blonde, of 19, considered good looking, and in love with a young man of 21, who is thoroughly devoted to me. Even though we were brought up in different sections of the country, it happens that most of our sentiments and ideas of life are mutual, but he is of a more sensitive nature than I, and I admit being rather impulsive.

Recently there was quite an argument between us, caused over a silly misunderstanding. It happened that I was in the wrong.

I admit speaking very rudely to this young man, but, of course, I am sorry, and he has taken it all quite to heart, but I never could humble myself sufficiently to apologize to anyone. Probably it is bashfulness on my part, but I just never did.

Don't you think he should be willing to let it pass by, or should I have a frank talk with him face to face? Of course it would be hard but probably I could try.

ROSEBUD: Very few of us can go through life without humbling ourselves at one time or another without being humbled by circumstances. If you care for the boy, and if you know that you spoke rudely to him, then why not be big enough to tell him that you are sorry for your rash words? If you really cared for him you would not wish to make him unhappy or to see him suffer unduly. Married life is a question of give and take, both sides must be prepared to give way on occasion. Otherwise there can be little happiness. How is he to know that you are sorry unless you admit it? Tell him that he has no reason to be sensitive about your words or actions, that you are impulsive, but that you are the last person in the world to deliberately hurt him.

place he was to proceed to Concord. Warren then sent for Revere, whom he instructed to ride to these villages by another route. The patriot silversmith sought out a friend and requested him to place two lanterns in the tower of North Church as a signal to the watchers in Charlestown, then proceeded to the Charles River where a boat awaited him. In this craft, with muffled oarlocks, he was rowed to the opposite shore, passing under the guns of the British man-of-war, Somerset and avoiding by five minutes the soldiers who had been sent to detain him.

In Charlestown Revere found that his signals had been seen, and procuring a horse, he immediately set off for Lexington. He had just passed Charlestown Neck when he saw two mounted British officers waiting under a tree. As these men rode toward him, Revere took flight and succeeded in eluding his would-be captors after one of them had been caught in a clay pond. In a letter written to a friend sometime later, Revere, describing his ride, said that from here on he "dared almost every horse" until he reached Lexington.

When he arrived at this place the courier patriot rode directly to the house of Rev. Jonas Clark, where Hancock and Adams were staying. He surprised these men at their danger and after parading of refreshments he started for Concord with Mr. Dawes, who arrived in the meantime, to warn the militia there of the plans to capture the stores collected in that city. They were joined by Dr. Prescott, a young patriot of that vicinity, but after proceeding only a short distance the three Americans were accosted by a body of English soldiers. Prescott escaped by jumping his horse over a stone wall, but his two companions were captured and in this abrupt manner the "midnight ride of Paul Revere" was rudely terminated. Prescott alone of the three riders was able to reach Concord.

Revere was not long detained by his captors who returned with him to Lexington where he was relieved of his horse. He then assisted Adams and Hancock to a more secluded retreat, Newportville Church on Monday afternoon. Refreshments were served by Mrs. John Birkey.

Despite the difference between the facts in the case and the picture drawn in Longfellow's immortal poem, Paul Revere remains none the less a patriot hero. Throughout the entire Revolution he was prominent in his service to his country. At first he acted as a messenger and made several trips from Boston to New York and Philadelphia to carry word to Congress of the situation in Massachusetts. He was one of the leaders in the Boston Tea Party. But his most famous exploit was, of course, his ride to Lexington.

A fact perhaps too little known is that Revere was "the most remarkable man to develop American industries that the first two hundred years of American history produced." He was an expert gold-and-silversmith; he rolled copper for use on the "Constitution"; he was an engraver, a dentist and an iron molder. He manufactured bells which were among the finest in the country and over seventy-five of these bells are still in use in New England. The copper rolling industry he established in Canton, Massachusetts, in 1804, is still in existence and is conducted today by direct descendants of its founder.

When Paul Revere died on May 10, 1818, he was eighty-three years old and enjoyed the respect and esteem of all his countrymen. He had served his country well and honorably—his life had been long and useful. Today America honors his memory in gratitude for his loyalty to the cause of independence.

FORD SMOOTHNESS

The new Ford has more than twenty ball and roller bearings

EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all—an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do.

At some points in the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At others, roller bearings are used regardless of their higher cost. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford insures smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

Why travel back and forth to your employment, which is here in Bristol, when such desirable dwellings are to be obtained here at such reasonable rents? It will pay any individual to investigate!

Work Where You Live and Live Where You Work.

If you are employed in Bristol you should live here. It will be less expensive and there are numerous other advantages derived from making your home in the town where you are employed.

You will save many hours a year which are now spent in traveling and you will have more time with your family.

The saving in money will also be considerable. Add to that which you are now paying for rent the amount which you spend in traveling back and forth to your employment here. You'll be surprised at the total. Rent a house here at a moderate rental and bank the difference.

Houses.

Comfortable dwellings, well situated and at moderate rents are to be found in that portion of Bristol which is immediately adjacent to the P. R. R. passenger station.

These houses make ideal homes and consist of six rooms with bath.

Conveniences.

They are heated by hot-air furnaces with a direct pipe leading to every room. They are lighted with electricity and are equipped with sewer, municipal water and gas.

Each room is well lighted and yet the space devoted to windows is not excessive.

Front porches are another attractive feature as is also a small rear yard where children can play in safety away from the perils of traffic.

Houses such as these would rent for considerably more in any city, where the conveniences would not surpass those offered here.

Gathering News For Courier Readers

How Does The Courier Get It's News?

This is a question frequently asked by readers in discussing the Courier. "I don't see how you cover so much territory," is the comment.

There are twenty persons employed by the Courier to gather the news of Bristol and the other towns in lower Bucks County. This staff of correspondants is ever on the alert for interesting items in their respective communities.

This group of twenty persons is composed of two correspondants assigned to cover the activities of the schools of Bristol Borough and Bensalem Township; one who reports the main sporting events of Bristol and nearby vicinity; a staff representative is located at Doylestown, the county seat, to gather the news of general interest happening there and to give first hand reports of the court doings.

In Bristol the council meetings, school board meetings and all of the main happenings within the borough are reported by a staff of representatives.

A staff reporter also 'covers' hospitals, undertakers, police courts and etc., daily.

The news of the churches in Lower Bucks County are featured every Saturday and are presented in a pleasing manner.

The International News Service, the second largest news gathering organization in the world, keeps the Courier informed every minute of the day as to world happenings as well as national and state affairs.

In addition to all of these agencies there are the countless friends who are ever thoughtful and when something of interest occurs in their section at once telephone the Courier and a staff reporter is assigned to write the story. Many a news 'tip' is received in this manner and accidents, fires, etc., are often telephoned almost as soon as they occur. To these friends the Courier feels deeply indebted.

Progress In Circulation

Today the Courier is distributed on the same day of publication to practically every community from Tullytown to Torresdale and from Bristol to Hulmeville.

At the end of 1929 the Courier had established in addition to a thorough coverage in Bristol daily routes at Tullytown, Edgely, Hulmeville, Newportville, Croydon, Andalusia, Fairview, West Bristol and Bath Road.

At the close of 1930 two more suburban communities have the Courier delivered the same day of publication. These are Bridgewater and Torresdale Manor.

Thorough Coverage for Advertisers

With the daily distribution of the Courier to subscribers in the villages and towns as enumerated above the Advertiser can readily see that the most thorough coverage is to be obtained by using Courier space.

Progress in Reader Interest

The Courier today is publishing in addition to all of the local news and such other features as it carried at the close of 1929, the writings of such well known authors as Winifred Black, an editorial writer of note; Nancy Lee, who deals with "Advice to Girls" in a way which makes her writings of exceptional interest and value to those seeking information of this nature; a comic strip by Milt Gross, one of the best comic artists of the day; a daily sport cartoon by Hardin Burnley, who vividly pictures the highlights in the realm of sports.

Progress in Advertising

There has been a substantial increase in the amount of advertising space used by Courier advertisers which is evidence that they, too, realize the ever increasing value of the Courier as an advertising medium.

Sir Arthur "Sends" a Message From Beyond

—Folks and Life Are About the Same There

A Medium Interprets and Winifred Black Is a Bit Disappointed in the Picture of Heaven "Relayed" by the Late Author of Sherlock Holmes.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

"DEAD people are a good deal like living people," says Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

They eat and drink and sleep and get tired and rest and go to school and to market and everything just as they did when they were what we call "alive."

Sir Arthur ought to know. He's a very intelligent man and a very observing man, and he's dead.

He relayed a message to the world through a certain Medium and the Medium wrote the message and the Cosmopolitan Magazine printed it and now we know all about it—maybe.

Well, if we do know how are we going to like it?

I am a little disappointed, myself. What's the use of dying and getting out of all the fuss and trouble, worry and misunderstanding—if you've got to go on buying and selling and eating and drinking just the same?

Are we going to have the same sort of food over there, Sir Arthur? Do tell us. Can we change the menu a little? We do get so tired of mutton and beef and pork and things. And the clothes, are there fashions in Heaven?

Dear me, I did look forward to those nice loose flowing robes and the pretty, becoming haloes.

Do we have to go on studying fashion magazines over there? Who will write them and publish them, do you suppose?

Newspapers? Dear, dear, what stunning special editions we could get out with Shakespeare and Voltaire and Bacon and Oliver Goldsmith for feature writers.

Milton's a little heavy and I'm afraid we should find Dante a trifle impetuous.

He might tread on the corns of too many subscribers.

But imagine an interview with Napoleon on the next war and what he thinks of Mister Mussolini.

And how would it be to get Wellington's opinion of Napoleon and Napoleon's estimate of Wellington? Hot stuff—eh, what?

Imagine the Sunday page. You could plan with Mary, Queen of Scots, which one of her three husbands she really and truly loved. And who would you send to get Elizabeth, formerly of England, to tell us whether Essex or Lester was the better lover?

It begins to look as if the news paper people are going to be busied on the other side of the swift river than they are on this side and that really seems a little unnecessary, doesn't it?

And how about our dispositions, Sir Arthur?

Aren't they going to change, at all?

Haven't we learned anything in all this turmoil of strife and bitter ness and misery?

Are we going to be just as silly and just as conceited and just as envious and just as petty over there as we are here?

I hope not, oh I hope not, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to the contrary notwithstanding, don't you?

CONNIE MACK PREPARES TO WIN ANOTHER FLAG

By Robert T. Paul
I. N. S. Special Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—Managing a major league ball club is more of a physical and mental strain than it used to be, so declared Connie Mack, 68-year-old director of the world champion Philadelphia Athletics, as he left here for Mt. Plymouth, Fla., on a five-week vacation. He was accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Shibe.

This five-week trip to the land of warmth, spotted with training camps, famous winter resorts and palatial homes, is to be more than a vacation. By Connie's own admission, he's going to Mount Plymouth to get into needed condition for another strenuous American league pennant race.

"Don't think this is going to be purely a pleasure jaunt," declared the veteran pilot, who hopes this season to win his third consecutive world championship, as he bid farewell to his family and many friends at the North Philadelphia station; "this to me will be what the training camp at Fort Myers will be to the ball player on my club."

"Big-league baseball has become a very specialized business," asserted

Mack, "not only for the player, but for the manager. To emerge a winner a manager must be as fit—physically and mentally as his men. A manager out of condition can't hope to cope with the alert, ever-thinking and aggressive player."

Surely, we asked Connie, training for him wouldn't mean getting down to weight. For the 68-year-old manager is of the extreme slender type so desired by and seldom gained—by the debutante.

"No, my weight will hardly change a pound or two," he smilingly replied. "I aim to harden myself so I can escape fatigue on long trips, keep my mind working with precision in the fifth as well as the second inning and still have enough reserve to replay a game after dinner to plan corrections for the mistakes we might have committed."

"I must be in condition when my men arrive in Fort Myers. At least, physically. I've a real job ahead of me this spring. I want to uncover or develop a pitcher or two to help Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw. There will be nearly 20 pitchers in camp and I'll be on the jump trying to look over all of them."

It isn't necessary to inquire of the popular Philadelphian when he expected to train for keeness of mind. Those who see him in winter as well as in summer know he's always functioning 100 per cent mentally.

Deep lines of worry, so conspicuous during the last world series with the St. Louis Cardinals after the National leaguers had taken two straight in the Mound City, had been replaced with contagious smiles. Cognizant of reports that several A's stars were holding out we wondered how Mack could be so happy. We mentioned this to him.

"Am I worried?" he repeated. "I'm not! I've been in the game too long to worry over holdouts, though I'm not admitting I have any this year. It will be time enough to worry when I reach Fort Myers and some of the highly touted youngsters don't come through. And there will be plenty to bother me once the championship season opens. For until proved otherwise, every club has a chance to dethrone us as champions."

"I'm going to play plenty of golf the next five weeks. Maybe a round or two after reaching Fort Myers, but I'll put my bags away for the spring, when real training gets under way. You can't give your best to two sports the way baseball is played today. It's one or the other, I'll stick to baseball."

The first group of Mack pitchers and catchers will leave Philadelphia for Fort Myers Saturday evening February 21. The infielders and outfielders will join them a week later.

The deceased is August Verick, 69, care-taker and cook of the Kensington Club, located on Creek avenue.

Never was this husky individual seen wearing a coat, either a suit or top coat. His usual garments, regardless of how low the mercury dropped, were trousers, shirt, and a cap. Verick had felt well at all times, and never had a sick day until one week before his demise.

Highly respected by all, the late Mr. Verick was one of the best known figures hereabouts, and was daily greeted by men, women and children as he went about his duties.

Even when the temperature dropped to near the zero point Mr. Verick's mode of dress remained unchanged, and a coat was not thought of by him. He was warm; hardened to outdoor life. He had a splendid physique, and presented an excellent appearance with his great height, broad shoulders and dark complexion.

But a little over a week ago he caught cold, and pneumonia developed. Death occurred on Sunday.

The late Mr. Verick was a former resident of Philadelphia, but for the past 17 years made his home in Croydon, and had resided at the Kensington Club house.

The services this afternoon took place at Fiehr's Funeral Home, Front and Susquehanna streets.

ment of Pennsylvania, American Legion; Mrs. Thomas B. Longhurst, Bucks County salon president; Mr. Longhurst; and the presiding officer of the Montgomery County Voiture.

Group singing and dancing were enjoyed by the 60 individuals in attendance.

A supper was served at 11 o'clock, consisting of: Sour kroust, pork, mashed potatoes, bread and butter, coffee, cakes, and mints. Favors found at the place of the women were small dolls with paper frocks resembling the costume of salon members,—white dresses, red capes with blue lining, and red chapeaus. Favors for the men were miniature pipes.

Ring's Fragile "Reps"

MAX BAER--
HIS "SECOND DEMPSEY" BUBBLE WAS EXPLODED BY SCHAAF.

BURNLEY 1-27

FISTIC reputations have been tarnished or wrecked with ever increasing frequency during the past twelve months through a variety of circumstances that range all the way from unexpected defeat to hocus-pocus scandal.

Perhaps the most notable example of that "rep" blight is that of Jack Sharkey who had the world's championship in his grasp last June when the only low blow delivered by him fouled Max Schmeling into the title. The effect of that fiasco was such that, for the first time in its history, Madison Square Garden had to call off its big open air Fall show when advance sales for Sharkey vs. Campolo were far, far short of Jack's $100,000 guaranty.

And now the Boston big boy—who really is a great ringman despite his erratic temperament—is being left completely out of the Schmeling - Stribling - Carnera championship eliminations, though many genuine fight experts rate Sharkey as the uncrowned champ.

Al Singer blasted Sammy Mandell's marvelous "rep" with a few-punch, one-round K. O. last Summer; then Tony Canzoneri did the same thing to Al in jig time. Jimmy McLarnin was supposed to have a set-up in Billy Petrolle but the latter all but scored a knockout in giving "Baby Face" a severe spanking. The famed Chocolate was whipped by Berg, La Barba and Battalino on decisions. Then Eddie Shea outpointed La Barba. Len Harvey, British champion, floored Vince Dundee for two but the American got up off the floor to earn the decision at the end of twelve hard-fought sessions. And so "rep" after "rep" was ruined or damaged.

Touted by many as the world's best heavy after knockouts over Von Porat and Scott, Bill Stribling did not impress in outscoring DeKuh and Griffiths in 10-rounders.

Perhaps the most tarnished "rep" of all is that of Primo Carnera, thanks largely to managerial misadventure that was seized upon by hostile press and commissions. They all but succeeded in deporting the huge Italian. However—despite the rough ride—Primo's closer than ever to the top and he has contracted to get a crack at the championship next Fall, glory be to Bill Duffy, "Doc" Morris, Dan Parker, et al!

A NEIGHBOR

My neighbor's, neighbor's, neighbor.
In years of wisdoms old,
He's full of wholesome laughter
And has a heart of gold.

Country gossip, chatter,
Seems just to him all wrong,
His eyes are pointed skyward
And on his lips a song.

The children gather 'round him,
Full of wholesome glee,
Even dogs adore him,
His soul's wide as the sea.

If trouble mounts your doorstep,
He's there to help you out,
Three cheers for this neighborly neighbor,
The countryside all shout.
